

Has anyone ever helped you when you needed to get somewhere and couldn't drive?
Would you give a friend a ride if they needed one?

We have an easy, flexible way for you to make a true impact on the lives of people in your community. Often, cancer patients don't have transportation to get to treatment or don't feel well enough to drive. You can help by providing rides to patients in your community. It only takes a few hours a month, and you can choose to drive when it works for you. We are in need of drivers, as well as people to help coordinate ride requests.

The American Cancer Society Road To Recovery[®] program connects volunteer drivers with those who need transportation to and from their treatments. Cancer patients in your community need your help, and you can make a real difference in their lives.

Will you help by becoming a Road To Recovery volunteer?
