Welcome to "How Women Won the Vote," a special Gazette published by the National Women's History Project. The NWHP has been encouraging people to celebrate women's suffrage anniversaries for most of our 37 year history and we are proud to publish this first of several Gazettes covering the Women's Suffrage Centennial in 2020. Our goal is to restore suffragists and the Votes for Women movement to their rightful place in American history.

Here we are pleased to present brief descriptions of major efforts now underway to observe the suffrage centennial throughout the country. There are an increasing number of projects and efforts at the local, state and national levels to remember American suffragists and honor their hard-won success. We also mention recent events that offer ideas and encouragement so you can join with others and do something special for 2020 where you live, study or work.

One thing we want to emphasize is that suffragists were active in all the states, often for generations, and all the states eventually ratified the 19th Amendment. However, few state activists are widely remembered and the state stories are barely known. Recognizing their importance, we list here the names of suffragists in every state, each state's voting record and links to its suffrage story to encourage you to learn more. In a future issue, we plan to focus on the federal campaign – from Susan B. Anthony's trial to national petition drives to picketing the White House one hundred years ago.

Suffragists left us a great gift – an empowering heritage of pride, momentum and purpose. We celebrate their example and those who carry on the spirit of these brave American women today.

A Call to Action

THE GOAL OF winning the right to vote involved hundreds of thousands of American women at the beginning of the 20th century. These suffragists revived and revitalized the long standing women's rights movement and developed modern strategies that convinced voters, won elections and compelled passage of a Constitutional amendment.

However, it was never easy. Throughout their long movement, women throughout the country faced ridicule, misrepresentation and outright rejection. Powerful chauvinistic opponents kept them within limits. Only with committed, unified action could they change their condition. That is why many became suffragists and led the drive for equal rights for American women.

The Perfect Opportunity

This Gazette is a Call to Action to celebrate and build on the heritage of the women's suffrage movement. The upcoming Suffrage Centennial in 2020 offers the perfect opportunity to take a new look at this historic drive for civil rights and the remarkable women who made it up. These suffragists organized a nonviolent grassroots uprising of women that won citizenship, political liberty and the right to vote for one half the country. Lasting over 72 years, this clear and persistent movement for a more inclusive democracy is a central part of American history.

While women in some states could already vote in 1920, and women in some states, particularly black and minority women, were blocked from voting, the Federal law was changed and women as a class finally won legal recognition as American citizens under the 19th Amendment. The vote set the stage for further reforms that continue today.

Staying Focused on Suffragists

The Women's Suffrage Centennial honors this specific part of American history. We encourage celebrations to keep the focus on the women who won the vote and not leave them behind in discussions of contemporary issues. The anniversary is not the time for such general approaches as "women in America" or "women in protest." Rather, it should mark the start of many shows, exhibits, discussions and art on the historic and spiritual importance of multicultural American suffragists.

Suffragists deserve their day and the centennial is the right time to welcome them back into American history. They are a key part of the American story and, even more importantly, they are sources of strength and inspiration. We can better choose what to do today if we know more about what they did in the past.

Many of these suffragists are role models for persistence who show both how hard and how important it is to try to move society towards justice and equality. And their success proves it can be done. They won democracy for half the country. In their honor, take action where you are remembering and celebrating the achievements of the women who won the vote. Their spirit embodies the democratic values we share and demonstrates, unmistakably, women's ability to succeed. Join the campaign!

We are indebted to Bryn Mawr College Library Special Collections for the use of photographs from their Carrie Chapman Catt Collection. The suffrage leader's scrapbooks hold a wealth of images including many of the leading women in the states.

Exciting Plans Under Way for the Suffrage Centennial

Many exciting efforts are already underway to celebrate women's history and the Women's Suffrage Centennial in 2020. From national organizations to state institutions to local groups, you'll find tremendous diversity, creativity, involvement and purpose here, whether happening now or in the works.

Individuals in an increasing number of states are organizing to see that the suffrage centennial is appropriately recognized. There are also many existing organizations that are integrating anniversary events into their schedules. Small town museums, historic sites, communities and individuals are also developing special ways to celebrate this historic advancement for both women and men.

One clear message all agree on is that there's no reason to wait until 2020. There is a lot to do over the next few years and a lot to celebrate wherever you are. National groups need volunteers in the states, so whatever your local involvement, you might consider connecting with one of the organizations like the WVC that wants to involve and assist citizens, activists, artists, teachers and public officials throughout the country.

Each of these efforts would love to hear of your interest and would certainly benefit from your financial support..

Arkansas

Arkansas holds a unique place in the history of the women's suffrage movement. In 1917, Arkansas became the first non-suffrage state in the union to allow women to vote in primary elections. On July 28, 1919, Arkansas became the 12th state to ratify the 19th Amendment, making it the first southern state to do so.

Planning for the centennial began in late 2015 with the formation of the Arkansas Women's Suffrage Centennial Project. The AWSCP is dedicated to telling the story of women winning the right to vote in Arkansas. Partner institutions and organizations will present exhibits, events and educational programs throughout the state, from February 2017 to August 2020. A virtual exhibit exploring the women's suffrage movement in Arkansas launched on February 7, 2017. Information about upcoming programs can be found at ualrexbits.org/suffrage/virtual-exhibit/ For more information, please contact Kathleen Pate, Arkansas Women's History Institute President at AWHI@gmail.com or (501) 777-8412.

Women's Suffrage Centennial Commission

The Women's Suffrage Centennial Commission Act (S. 847) was incorporated into the agreement for a FY17 omnibus spending measure, along with an initial $2 million dollar appropriation for the commission. The bill is co-sponsored by 15 of the 21 female senators, 14 Democrats plus Republican Susan Collins of Maine. The omnibus still has to clear the House and be signed by the president, reports Brian Moulton, Counsel, Office of Senator Tammy Baldwin (D-WI). Women's Rights National Historical Park

Women's Rights National Historical Park tells the story of the first Women's Rights Convention held in Seneca Falls, New York, on July 19-20, 1848. It is a story of struggles for civil rights, human rights, and equality - global struggles that continue today.

Each July, the park hosts Convention Days, three days filled with exciting speakers, historical actors, and demonstrations to commemorate the New York State suffrage movement and the national centennial.

Breakthrough in New York

Mrs. Walter McNab (Helen Guthrie) Miller speaking from an automobile during the New York campaign in 1915.

When male voters in New York approved women's suffrage at the November 6, 1917 election, they thrust the drive for equality into the national spotlight as never before. Not only was New York the most influential state in the nation but it was also the first one east of the Mississippi to approve Votes for Women. It represented a major breakthrough.

The nationally-watched election, which made New York the twelfth state where women could vote equally with men, marked a milestone in women's long drive for civil rights and political liberty. Following the election, the economic strength and political power of New York became decisive factors in the national drive for equal suffrage.

Suffragists rest between stops while canvassing New York state during 1917.

During New York's Suffrage Centennial, we remember and honor the "far sighted" men of New York and pay tribute to the resilient strength and exceptional ability of New York suffragists.

Wartime Campaign

Immediately following their defeat in 1915, New York suffragists began a new campaign and skillfully persuaded legislators to put their measure on the ballot again. Then they waged a second extensive, disciplined campaign to win a majority of male votes in New York City and in every district of the enormous and diverse state.

However, this time there were extraordinary obstacles. Not only did the nation declare war in April 1917 but a deadly influenza epidemic also broke out, limiting mass gatherings and bringing mourning to many homes.

Surrounded by uncertainty and despair, experienced state suffragists stayed focused on their goal. Adapting their tactics to the changing times, they waged a muted but pointed campaign, linking arms with the war effort while steadfastly demanding the same democratic rights that soldiers were fighting for abroad. During the Civil War, suffragists had learned not to subordinate their drive for equal rights to the affairs and wars of men. This time, they steered a patriotic course, balancing loyalty and national service with their unwavering demand for political equality. However, the war severely drained resources and personnel, and dominated the news.

National Service

Immediately after war was declared, American women responded by the millions to the idea of national service despite the fact that they were denied the vote and barred from active military service. Not sure of how to respond, the government created a Woman's Advisory Committee of the Council of National Defense and drafted several suffragists to lead it. In its ranks were prominent leaders Anna Howard Shaw, the Council president, and Carrie Chapman Catt. After she was appointed, Shaw quietly agreed to take on more Council work to allow Catt to keep leading the national suffrage drive.

When Catt, a long time New York suffrage figure, had been elected to lead the national suffrage association in December 1915, the leadership of the second New York campaign was assumed by socialite Vera Whitehouse and a team of well connected suffragists, many of whom were veterans of the 1915 campaign. Determined to run a fully funded campaign, the state leaders decided to use their contacts to raise money the way political parties did – from wealthy men.

A Remarkable Number of Suffragists

New York State contributed a remarkable roster of suffragists for a single state. From the earliest years of the movement, women rose up to demand their rights and men supported them. Some New York women moved to other states and influenced residents there. This list supplements the New Yorkers named on page 11 to encourage wider recognition and further research.

World War I poster called women to national service.

The women approached ten men for donations of $10,000 each and sought lesser sums from many others. With good organization, hard work and determination – and all their persuasive powers – these women were able to raise more funds, almost $700,000, for a suffrage drive than ever before.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE PARADERS BEARING IN THE PARADE ON FIFTH AVENUE A WEEK AGO PLACARDS CONTAINING THE

Patriotism

Patriotism was the central theme of the campaign, with suffragists supporting the war effort while anti-suffragists labeled them traitors for pursuing their cause in time of war. Both sides voiced opposition to the “militant” suffragists who had begun picketing the White House in January, claiming they confused voters and embarassed the president at wartime. All these opinions were strongly voiced during the New York campaign.

Seeking a non-confrontational approach, suffragists had launched an ambitious statewide petition drive before the war to gather the signatures of as many New York women as possible who said they wanted to vote. Eventually, suffragists accumulated over one million names and posted them on huge boards that they carried them down Fifth Avenue in a Procession of the Petitions during their only suffrage parade, held on October 27, 1917.

Just over a week later, their strategy succeeded, garnering enough votes to enfranchise New York women and sending a clear and powerful message to the rest of the country. As one campaign poster declared, “The Woman’s Hour has Struck.”

Showing Suffragists’ Strength

The historic drive for women’s suffrage in New York, while on a much higher level, exemplified the dozens of state campaigns suffragists waged for over fifty years. In every drive, the women had to organize support and lobby their state legislatures just to get their measure on the ballot. Faced with repeated defeats, the women persevered. They organized supporters, educated the public, lobbied politicians and campaigned to win passage by the male-only electorate. Even in small states, it was an enormous amount of work.

The New York campaign reflected how many women nationally had been activated by the suffrage movement and had challenged themselves to take on wider responsibilities, including war work. The election also revealed suffragists’ growing influence and political strength, a situation that was true in other states as well. In New York, they were able to not only overcome powerful opposition but also to neutralize the Tammany Hall political machine by involving politicians’ wives and threatening revenge against any candidate who opposed women voting.

The Empire State passing equal suffrage “was accepted by the politically wise as the handwriting on the wall,” noted suffrage lobbyist Maud Wood Park. Politicians could see the future: public opinion was changing rapidly, suffrage strength was growing and, with New York aboard, Votes for Women nationally was soon to become a reality.

Suffragists Active in Every State

Who won the vote in my state? Who led the campaigns and where can I learn more?

We attempt to briefly answer these questions below with a summary of each state's suffrage history, the names of a number of state suffragists and links to more information. We want to particularly emphasize the national scope of the women's suffrage movement and to encourage individuals to study and share their state's role in the enfranchisement of women.

Our choices as to where to place some of these women can be debated – some are under their birthplaces while some are not – but we want to give states maximum opportunity to claim local women who were important in winning enfranchisement at the state and national levels.

56 Campaigns, 41 Defeats

Suffragists waged 56 electoral campaigns in 31 states to win Votes for Women. They lost 41 of these drives and yet they persisted to reach their ultimate goal. Eventually, they won passage of equal suffrage measures in 15 states and won presidential, or partial, suffrage through 15 state legislatures.

By the time the 1920 election approached, politicians were shocked that women would be voting for president in 30 of the 48 states, even without the 19th Amendment. This was the direct result of the work of state suffragists.

These same women, many now with years of experience, won ratification by the necessary

The key actions and coordinated strategies by suffragists in local communities, cities and states throughout the country deserve much wider recognition. They played a crucial role in securing Votes for Women nationwide.

For our information we relied primarily on printed sources and online resources posted by state libraries and historical societies. We consulted internet sources like Wikipedia cautiously and always confirmed facts elsewhere.

The Governor of Maine signs a partial suffrage bill in February, 1917.

THE AWAKENING

By 1915, women had won enfranchisement in the eleven western states, leading women in the midwest and eastern states to reach out for the torch of freedom, as Hy Mayer suggested in his illustration for Life magazine. New York became the first equal suffrage state east of the Mississippi in 1917.

Many methods were used to "awaken the voters."

Suffragists leaflet men on a streetcar, probably in New Jersey in 1915.

From the 1912 suffrage campaign in Kansas

The treasurer reported $37.50 received as membership fees, and $100, as a gift from Mrs. Catt. This was a small sum to begin a campaign for about 500,000 votes, but all hearts were filled with courage. . . .

"With votes as with most of the dollars – they were not coming unsought, and in order to make sure of them they must be looked for in their own habitat. This the women did on horseback, in wagons, carriages, steam cars and automobiles. They were found in the shops, offices and stores, at the fairs, conventions and Chautauquas, at the theater and the circus, on the farms and the highways, at the fireside and in the streets."

Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony Statue Fund

Help break the "bronze ceiling" to create the first statue of real women in New York City's Central Park. While the park includes statues of fictional females like Mother Goose, the real women who helped build the city, state and nation are nowhere to be found until now.

The NYC Parks Department has approved our statue of suffrage pioneers Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony for location near Central Park and West 77th Street. Presently, the Statue Fund is focusing on a major fundraising drive to match the $500,000 Challenge Grant from New York Life Insurance Company. Access our Twitter, Facebook, and Instagram pages as well media reports on our project from our website: www.monumentalwomen.org

The Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Susan B. Anthony Woman Suffrage Movement Monument will honor not only Stanton and Anthony, but all those responsible for the largest nonviolent revolution in American history.

The statue will include the names of other women whose work was invaluable to winning the vote as part of the design. A major Women's History educational campaign will begin with the unveiling of the statue on August 26, 2020 to tell the complete, compelling, and complex woman suffrage story.

What One Small Town in New York Did with Women's History

Need a role model for what a small town can do for women's history? Two years ago, the town board of Woodstock, in New York's Hudson Valley, unanimously passed a resolution. The goal? To celebrate and promote the contributions of its women, particularly during the state's suffrage centennial in 2017. Few would have predicted back then the extent of the outpouring of creative expression that followed.

"Once the word started spreading, so many people stepped forward with information and photographs about their female ancestors and friends from the past. We're buoyed with enthusiasm," said Olivia Twine, board member of the Historical Society of Woodstock. "We're looking now to 2020 when American women will have been voting for 100 years. Our archive includes a 1918 photo of local women voting for the first time. We're recognizing local women with a focus and enthusiasm like never before."

Additional initiatives included a collaboration between the Woodstock School of Art and the Historical Society of Woodstock in an exhibit of women artists in Woodstock, a guide to the 2017 suffrage centennial published by the Woodstock

Chamber of Commerce & Arts, an exhibit of Woodstock women by the Historical Society of Woodstock, and a book featuring Woodstock women of the past. You don't have to "plan big" to make a difference; just plan!

Inez Milholland Centennial

The Inez Milholland Centennial honors America's suffrage martyr 100 years after her death. The project offers a good model for raising the visibility of suffragists in your area. (www.InezMilhollandCentennial.com). A book, Remembering Inez, is available from www.RememberingInez.com and a film, Forward Into Light, is available from InezMilholland.org.

Inez was one of three new inductees in the New York State Senate's Historical Women of Distinction 2017 exhibit. Here is the Legislative Resolution: legislation.nysenate.gov/pdr/bills/2017/J946. Her memory is being honored with exhibits, performances and historic markers in her hometown and near her grave in Lewis, New York.

RememberingInez.com and a film, Forward Into Light, is available from InezMilholland.org.

Illinois

In Illinois, several projects are underway for the 2020 Suffrage Anniversary. Researchers are working on documenting Illinois women who were involved with the National American Woman Suffrage Association (NAWSA) for the Women and Social Movements website, and are collecting site-specific information for the National Collaborative for Women's History Sites' Votes for Women Trail. We have also formed a committee with the League of Women Voters of Illinois to begin planning for a statewide commemoration of the anniversary that will include many other partners. Kentucky

The Kentucky Woman Suffrage Project (KWSP) team meets monthly to talk about various projects, events and activities to attend in person or online. We have created a digital portal, <http://networks.h-net.org/KyWomanSuffrage/>, located at H-Kentucky, a network within a platform hosted by H-Net: Humanities and Social Sciences Online. The components of the KWSP portal include:

- biographical sketches
- a timeline
- a "Votes for Women Trail" database with annotations (to be connected with the national Suffrage History Digital Map)
 - an annotated bibliography (primary, secondary and tertiary resources)
 - blog posts keeping everyone up to date about the latest happenings and teaching resources.

In addition to the digital humanities project via H-Kentucky, the team is organizing conferences, scholarly presentations, special issues in scholarly journals, exhibits, street tours and in-costume parades. Maine

Writer Anne Gass, of Gray, Maine, paid tribute to her great-grandmother with the book, "Voting Down the Rose: Florence Brooks Whitehouse and Maine's Fight for Woman Suffrage." Then she retraced suffragist Sara Bard Field's cross-country automobile tour from 1915. Now, Anne reports that the Maine State Museum is planning an exhibit commemorating Maine's ratification of the 19th Amendment, scheduled to open in 2019. Anne is on the Museum committee and has also formed a speakers bureau with several older women who speak about their activism and their own experiences with sex discrimination. They speak at high schools, community colleges and other venues, with Anne talking about suffrage history. She and others are trying to persuade political leaders, women's rights advocates and historians that Maine ought to have a broader effort to recognize this important anniversary. agassmaine@gmail.com

Washington D.C.

The capital is paying attention to the upcoming centennial, with representatives of federal institutions already planning and meeting together. Institutions including the National Archives www.archives.gov, Library of Congress www.loc.gov, National Portrait Gallery <http://npg.si.edu/>, National Park Service, the Smithsonian <http://americanhistory.si.edu/> and others are developing plans for displays and exhibitions related to the suffrage centennial. Check out their individual websites for updates.

In addition, institutions like the Library of Congress www.loc.gov and the National Archives archives www.archives.gov/education/lessons/woman-suffrage have excellent online resources available including original documents, lesson plans, photographs, exhibits and more on the women's rights movement.

The Newseum <https://newseumed.org/collection/womens-suffrage-edcollection/>, also in the capital, has created an online exhibit utilizing their historic newspaper collection entitled, "Women, Their Rights and Nothing Less: The First Amendment and the Women's Suffrage Movement."

The newly-created Belmont-Paul Women's Equality National Monument www.nps.gov/bepa/index is the closest thing yet to a museum on American suffragists, complete with marble busts and historic heirlooms. Most belong to the National Woman's Party www.NationalWomansParty.org, formed during the suffrage movement. The NWP and the National Park Service produced an Activity Book on How to Be a Junior Suffragist: nps.gov/nama/learn/kidsyouth/upload/BEPA_Junior_Suffragist_Book.pdf

Non-governmental organizations are also laying plans to recognize this historic anniversary. Stay up to date with the League of Women Voters <http://lwv.org/>, American Association of University Women "Empowering Women Since 1881" <http://www.aauw.org/> and other longstanding groups focused on the welfare of women as well as those focused on American history, democracy and the Constitution.

National Women's History Museum

The National Women's History Museum created an educational online resource center that highlights key aspects of how women won the right to vote. "Crusade for the Vote" examines the women's right movement from the early Republic era through the passage of the 19th Amendment. It contains short articles on various aspects of the Suffrage Movement, biographies of key figures, guiding questions, lesson plans, and primary sources. To explore NWHM's suffrage resource center visit CrusadeForTheVote.org. Additional resources will be added to the site as we build to the 100th anniversary of the 19th Amendment. www.nwhm.org

American Women's History Initiative

The Congressional Commission to study the potential for an American Museum for Women's History released a report in 2016 that called for the creation of a pan-institutional Smithsonian Women's History Initiative. The Initiative would hire and place women's history curators in key museums throughout the Smithsonian's family of museums and ALSO support exhibits showcasing American women's contributions to our country's story.

The goal of the Initiative is to build momentum and grassroots support for constructing a permanent museum in a prominent location in the Capital.

Women and Social Movements in the United States

Writing Biographical Profiles of American Suffragists

Women and Social Movements in the United States, the online subscription journal and database (accessible through many libraries), is creating an Online Biographical Dictionary of the Woman Suffrage Movement.

Volunteers have already started writing brief biographical sketches of more than 2,500 suffragists who were active with the National American Woman Suffrage Association between 1900 and 1920. The goal is to have the Dictionary ready for 2020.

The WSM is looking for individuals interested in researching and writing one or more biographical sketches (roughly 500 words) and faculty members interested in having their students prepare biographical sketches. Our academic advisors will review and copyedit the sketches. Project Director Tom Dublin will arrange for the publication of the sketches on the website and will give author credit to all writers. He has already led efforts to document black suffragists and members of the National Woman's Party.

Boston Women's Heritage Trail

"Remember the ladies," stated Abigail Adams in 1776. In the two centuries since, neither John Adams nor generations of men that followed did much to remember or commemorate the numerous women who helped mold the New Republic, even in Boston.

This began to change when a group of teachers, librarians and students brainstormed and inaugurated the Boston Women's Heritage Trail in 1989. We have continued to restore women to their rightful place by uncovering, chronicling and disseminating information about the women who have made lasting contributions to the City of Boston.

Our talks and trails, growing in number, cover many neighborhoods of Boston and are available on our website and by smartphone app. Our printed trail guide can also be ordered on our website. <http://bwht.org>

National Votes for Women Trail

In honor of the August 26, 2020 centennial celebration of woman's suffrage in the United States, the National Collaborative for Women's History Sites (ncwhs.org) is leading the effort to develop a National Votes for Women Trail. The Trail will highlight the role of each state in the 72-year bloodless revolution to achieve women's suffrage.

This project is truly a grassroots effort. Each state will have a coordinator to lead volunteers from across their state to identify sites that have a connection with the women's suffrage movement. The information is entered into a comprehensive database that is used to populate an interactive nationwide map, which will represent a more complete story of the struggle for women's suffrage in the United States.

The National Votes for Women Trail has also recently consulted with global advertising agency Y&R to use their newly developed The Whole Story app to allow participants to create virtual statues of women and place them next to male statues.

Elizabeth Cady Stanton Virtual Reality Tour

Is there an effective tool for educators that will capture the interest of 21st century youth? One might be virtual-reality tours through Google Expeditions, which now include more than 700 digital tours.

In honor of International Women's Day in 2017, the biography of women's rights pioneer Elizabeth Cady Stanton became a Google Expedition. It was created by Coline Jenkins, Stanton's great-great granddaughter, and Debra Kolsrud of Johnstown, New York, to share Stanton's legacy and inspire social justice activism today. The title of the tour is "Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Women's Rights" and it is available free to anyone.

To access the tour, begin by logging-in to a current gmail account or create a new account, and then search for "Google Expeditions" to download the free app

(not available for laptops). To view the tours from the Google Expedition site, select iguideit and scroll through the choices. You can read the tour content on screen as you follow the 360-degree panoramic images and added photos that enhance the narrative.

Kits are available for educators who wish to purchase cardboard V-R boxes so students can view the tour as "explorers" while the teacher reads aloud the text (see photo) as "guide" for the downloaded tours.

Turning Point Suffragist Memorial Association

Turning Point Suffragist Memorial Association is raising funds to build a national woman suffrage memorial near Washington D.C. The park-like site will commemorate the millions of suffragists who fought for more than seven decades to win the vote for American women. Turning Point's mission is "to educate, inspire and empower present and future generations to remain vigilant in the quest for equal rights." Plans include a Turning Point Institute for girls to participate in leadership and advocacy programs. The memorial dedication will coincide with the centennial anniversary of ratification of the 19th Amendment in August 2020.

The Association is seeking sympathetic professionals and suffrage history enthusiasts to join our National Board and represent Turning Point in your respective state. Turning Point is a non-profit institution and naming rights in the memorial park are available. Contact Pat Wirth, Executive Director, at pwirth@suffragistmemorial.org or (703) 201-3171. www.suffragistmemorial.org. Their "Suffragist of the Month" is always worth checking out.

Incredibly, the struggle to win woman suffrage in the United States lasted 72 years (1848-1920) and involved millions of women and men making enormous sacrifices. Suffrage was won in New York State on November 6, 1917 with New York City men, led by trade unionists and immigrants, favoring suffrage by over 100,000 votes.

Women's Equality: The Campaign for Equal Justice Continues

Remember, it took 72 years, countless campaigns and hundreds of thousands of people mobilizing for women to win the right to vote. With each defeat came a stronger resolve to move forward. Never relenting and always determined, American women won the right to vote in 1920 and never looked back.

Women's Equality Day, August 26, is the official anniversary of the ratification of the 19th Amendment, which secured the right to vote for women. Celebrate this anniversary with special events and programs. Make sure that your city council, board of supervisors, state and federal officials issue proclamations.

Visit www.nwhp.org for examples. Help ensure that the importance of the right to vote – and the legacy of American suffragists – are recognized and celebrated at the local, state and federal levels.

Hundreds of thousands of women from every state, using the tactics of their foremothers, gathered in our nation's capital on January 21, 2017 to make women's voices heard.

Join the campaign today!

With communication resources that our foremothers could not have imagined, let us continue to move history forward. Start by creating an event or program for Women's Equality Day for your community, school, workplace or organization. Visit www.nwhp.org for ideas and resources. The year is full of other dates – events, birthdays, anniversaries – that help to “write women back into history.”

The Women's History Alliance has launched a lobbying effort to have Women's Equality Day declared a federal holiday in 2020. To join this effort, email nwhp@nwhp.org
